Box No. V Reasoned statement under Rule 43bis.1(a)(i) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability;
citations and explanations supporting such statement

This difference provides a solution to the problem of creating a supporting frame for a computer tomograph with a coolant-conducting system which is well-suited for this purpose and also simple to construct.

Document D2 discloses a computer tomography system in which a heat exchanger is arranged with the rotating drum in a co-rotating manner in the gantry housing. The heat is conducted away while the rotating drum is idling between two measurements by means of a quick coupling between the heat exchanger and the water cooling circuit that is arranged outside the gantry housing.

A bearing ring configured as a hollow section is well-known to a person skilled in the art; however, the available prior art does not give any suggestion of configuring a bearing ring as a hollow section in which two fluidly separated annular closed hollow spaces are created in order to conduct coolant according to claim 1. Therefore, the invention is considered to involve an inventive step.

Claim 10 contains all of the features of claim 1 and thus likewise satisfies the PCT requirements with respect to novelty (PCT Article 33(2)) and inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)).
